VOL. X. NO. 260. CHARLEROI, WASHINGTON CO., PA., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 22, 1910. One Cent

John K. Tener Acclaimed Candidate for Governor

HIS NAME ONLY ONE SUGGESTED

Train With Charleroi Delegation Will Arrive Home Tonight at 10:30 O'clock Leaving Harrisburg at 2:00 O'clock This Afternoon.

THE OTHER RESULTS

Congressman John K. Tener, of Charleroi, was nominated by acclamation at 12 o'clock today as candidate for Governor by the Republican State convention at Harrisburg. No other candidates were placed in nomination. Mr. Tener's running mate will be Congressman John Reynolds of Bedford, for Lieutenant Governor.

The convention was called to order at the appointed time this morning, and it was not long until the matter of choosing the man to represent the Republican party for Governor came up for final action. All possible opposition to Mr. Tener's candidacy had been withdrawn by this time, the last to pull out of the fight being Lieutenant Governor Robert S. Murray of Johnstown and a clear field was left for the Charleroi man.

The nomination speech was made as per arrangement by Judge J. P. Taylor of Washington and the second was by Representative George E. Alter of Allegheny county.

Following the selection of Congressman Reynolds as a candidate for Lieutenant Governor, the appointment of the candidates for the other different places was taken up. [illegible] Hoyle, of Lebanon, was named for secretary of internal affairs [illegible] Wright of Susquehanna [illegible] State Treasurer. The entire ticket [illegible] as a strong one, and [illegible]

[illegible] is a name dear [illegible] Mr. Tener [illegible] tion times. It is not [illegible] he will return with the Charleroi delegation, but go to Washington, where he will remain for a few days. In the meantime, arrangements will be made for his home coming celebration, which will surpass by far any ever given to an individual in this section.

Alleges Fraud

Alleging fraud and corruption in the recent primary election of the Second legislative district, Berkey H. Boyd of Greensburg has instituted legal proceedings for the return of the ballot boxes of Arnold and Hyde Park for a recount.

Mrs. Jesse K. Johnston leaves this evening for Foxen, Conn., where she will visit her mother.

Charleroi's Showing.

Charleroi did herself proud in the showing made at Harrisburg last evening in favor of the candidacy of Congressman John K. Tener for Governor. Whatever the future may have in store, one thing demonstrated at the State capitol is that Charleroi is on the map. The attention the Magic City delegation attracted of the assembled political hosts, and the advertising our town has gotten throughout the State, is worth all the effort and expense of the excursion. For Charleroi alone it is a good investment.

But more direct and further reaching results are expected. There is perfect confidence on the part of John K. Tener's friends that he will, if elected, fill the executive chair in a way that will not only be a credit to the Pennsylvania state government, but to himself as well. Mr. Tener's chances steadily increased, since his modest announcement that if he were nominated for Governor by his party he couldn't do otherwise than accept the honor and delegation after delegation of delegates have lined up for him since meeting him and his friends at Harrisburg. The glad tidings were received by Charleroi people with most hearty connratulations to to their fellow townsman.

A Beneficent Institution

The social last week for the benefit of the Monessen-Charleroi Hospital by the local Ladies' Auxiliary, calls attention to a worthy institution that has made few appeals to the public, but is nevertheless in urgent need of more aid than it has ever gotten. Next to the schools, perhaps, no public institution is so important to a community as a hospital. Particularly is this true in an industrial section like this where modern invention and development have increased rather than diminished danger to life and limb.

Since its establishment the Monessen-Charleroi Hospital has proven itself a most beneficient institution in the alleviation of human suffering. Its availability affords prompt relief in the distressing accidents which occur with such distressing frequency in this community. Scarcely a week goes by when some bruised or bleeding form is not borne there from the immediate vicinity to be tenderly nursed to life again. Even when life is hopeless the patient's dying moments can be made comfortable instead of adding to the torture in a jolting car in the long journey to a distant hospital.

No one knows how many lives have been saved at the Monessen-Charleroi Hospital. Its existence is added security to life in this community, because its facilities are always available when sudden operations are necessary. This of itself is sufficient grounds for liberal support and appreciation. As it is the institution stands a haven of refuge to suffering humanity, where previously there was no alternative but to face the King of Terrors. There should be renewed effort on the part of the public to give support to the hospital.

ELECTRIC SPARKS

Charleroi never was such a happy deserted town as it is today.

Would the Washington Observer please inform us just whom they would sugggest for Governor. Wonder if Mr. Acheson wouldn't like to think that he could make a good run. If he really does think so, it would be a pity not to give him opportunity of running on an independent ticket such as suggested by Rev. Nicholson.

It would be dangerous for the poilte French duelist of today to fire into the air the first shot for then he might hit an aviator.

For mental rest is prescribed less discussion of the pennant prospects, and more discussion of the game of gold.

If walking is considered a much better exercise than autombile riding, the indications are that many of us are not looking for exercises.

Ain't it hot?

It is a very noticeable fact that in some places the nose tints are in much greater variety than rose tints.

Some gas engines shut down simply from jealousy when they smell the gasoline from an automobile.

With the automobile making things disagreeable on the street and the gas engine in the celler making things very disagreeable, what will the airship in the air do.

It is said that Kaiser Bill needs help to obtain and retain seat on the water wagon. What he needs is some more of the Roosevelt strenuosity.

Next Thing is to Make Choice of Successor

Who will be the successor to Congressman J. K. Tener in Congress, is a question which is bothering politicians of this district at the present time.

Charles Bentley who was elected as a representative in the general assembly at the last election and C. E. Carothers of Canonsburg, are mentioned as possibilities, and Judge J. Sharpe Wilson of Beaver county is prominently mentioned. R. K. Aiken of New Castle is another man suggested for the position.

The Republican state convention today adopted a rule for the nomination of a congressman in the Washington-Beaver-Lawrence district to succeed John K. Tener. The primaries law is silent on the subject and it is up to the convention to make a general law governing such cases.

CHARLEROI PARTY CREATES IMPRESSION AT HARRISBURG

Boom Candrdacy of Congressman J. K Tener

BIG PARADE A FEATURE

Washington, Lawrence and Beaver Send Big Delegation

Charleroi and Washington county people in general attracted much attention last night in Harrisburg, by their parade, and Congressman John K. Tener who today was nominated for Governor by the Republican party was tendered a great ovation. The city of Harrisburg was alive with enthusiasts booming Mr. Tener's candidacy from early yesterday until late at night. With the Charleroi delegation was the Williamsport band, the best in the state, which joined the party at Tyrone.

The train load of Washington, Lawrence and Beaver county boomers with the Charleroi party at the head arrived at Harrisburg at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The Washington county seat delegation had the Washington Cornet Band and Judge J. F. Taylor who placed Mr. Tener's name before the convention was in the party. With bands playing, red fire burning, streamers floating in the air and banners displayed announcing John K. Tener for Governor, the Western Pennsylvanians marched over the principal streets of the city, and to the Lochiel Hotel, where Mr. Tener is quartered. He appeared on the balcony to greet them and was given a great ovation. A great time of handshaking followed. A song adapted for the occasion was heartily sung during the parade to the tune "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly," the words of it being as follows:

Has anybody here seen Tener?
T-E-N-E-R.
Has anybody here seen Tener?
Tener from Charleroi.
His hair is black and his eyes are blue;
He's the Governor for me and you.
Has anybody here seen Tener? Who?
Tener from Charleroi.

CARNIVAL OPENS IN FULL BLAST

The big trained wild animal show of the Barkoot Carnival company opened for the first time last night, and crowds viewed the unusually meritous attractions furnished. This is one of the big feature shows with the carnival. The Old Plantation, Jesse James, and the number of other shows did big business, and the Moorish Palace, one of the features was packed to the doorway from first to last. The big fat man on McKean makes it very interesting for his audience. He promises a very interesting program tonight.

The Flea Circus is one of the most interesting features ever presented in the city. It consists of 350 performing fleas. Last night was the first night for this show to open, owing to an accident in the last town. The big storm blew down the tent and live electric wires coming in contact with the fleas, wounded and crippled a number of the stars. Yesterday Mr. Wendel, the proprietor received a shipment of educated fleas and the rest of the week they will be on exhibition. The fleas do acrobatic work, juggling, bicycle riding, walking tight wire, dancing and many other feats. The question was asked last evening as to how he began trainihg fleas and he answered: "At first when fleas are captured they are compelled to wear a ball and chain for six months, in order to stop them from jumping. Then they are educated and trained." The life of the fleas is from eight to twelve years. A number of these fleas that have been on exhibition for the past twelve years and the star is "Tokbar," The high dive will be at 10:30 o'clock tonight.

ALLEGED WILDNESS ON TRAIN GOT MAN OF VALLEY IN JAIL

John Hanlon from the Monongahela valley, this morning paid a fine of $10 and costs for wildness in which he took part on a train here yesterday. Hanlon was arrested by a P.R.R. detective and taken before Justice of the Peace Rice where he was found guilty to the charge. He was fined $10 and costs, or sentenced to 30 days in jail. He managed to find some friends with wherewithal this morning and paid.

GAMES OF CHANCE MUST BE STOPPED ON THE STREETS

Upon complaints from local citizens Chief of Police C. W. Albright said this morning that he would have all games of chance, which have been conducted in connection with the carnival here, stopped. Complaints were made that various kinds of devices were conducted illegally.

FIREMEN WILL NOT RECEIVE ANY MONEY FROM THE CARNIVAL

Editor Mail:

A statement appeared in your paper to the effect that the Carnival being held in Charleroi this week is under the auspices of the police department and Fire company.

We take this opportunity of correcting the same and stating that the Fire company has been in no way connected with this affair.

POPULAR COUPLE WEDDED AT CHURCH

This morning at 9 o'clock at St. Jerome's Catholic church took place the wedding of Miss Mary Elizabeth Fries, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Fries, of 128 Fallowfield avenue, and Francis J. Lee of Dunlevy. The wedding ceremony was performed by the the uncle of the bride, Rev. W. D. Fries, in the presence of a large number of frends and relatives of the families. The couple were attended by Miss Stella Connelly and Patrick Moore. The wedding march from Mendelssbon was played by Mrs. Bertie Kleist. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served to the couple and this afternoon at 2 o'clock a dinner and reception was tendered the couple, the members of the families and immediate friends at the home of the bride's parents. The couple leave later in the afternoon for the Northern part of the state, where they will spend a week with friends, upon their return to take up their residence in Charleroi. Both are well known in Charleroi and this vicinity. The bride is an accomplished young lady and popular among a host of friends and acquaintances. The groom is an employe of the Pittsburg Railway company, being a conductor on the local line.

LADY MACCABEES OUTING AT PARK

The Lady Maccabee order of Monessen is today holding their annual outing at Eldora Park and a good crowd being present, a fine time is being enjoyed. There are people present from all along the valley, many from Charleroi.

Mediaeval Architecture.

On the lower floor of the Brooklyn museum may now be seen a series of photographs that cannot fail to be of interest to every one to whom the ideas and practices of mediaeval architects and artists make a genuine appeal.

They illustrate the doctrine held by the curator of fine arts of the museum that the builders of mediaeval times frequently introduced irregularities or deviations from mechanical exactness in their churches and cathedrals by intention and that where irregularities are found which may have been accidental the accident was not necessarily due to ignorance or carelessness on the part of the builder, but to the general indifference to symmetry felt by architects in the middle ages and to their willingness to see in divergence from straight lines an element of beauty.—New York Times.

MISSED ONE POINT.

The Lady Told Him What More He Could Have Said.

"I am going to tell you the truth about yourself," he said

"Go on," said the young and ambitious actress.

"I have in my time had rare opportunities to observe beautiful, graceful and talented women, and I violate no confidence in saying that you are the queen of them all You unite in your lovely person that peculiar magnetism which lays audiences at your feet Your genius, shining through all the deficiencies of stagecraft, enables you to triumph over every obstacle. So supreme are you that you have the right to rise above all conventionalities, to marry, to love, to discard whom you please, and no one will dare to criticise. Your work will live. You are the very personification of the highest art United with this your perfection of beauty gives you the just title to a lasting fame."

"Is all that true?" she asked softly.

"Absolutely. Would you have me say more? What more could I say?"

She sighed.

"You might," she answered, "have mentioned my clothes and my figure."—Puck.

Disinterested.

Lord Monboddo, an eminent member of the Scotch judiciary and one of the clear cut figures in Boswell's immortal "Life of Johnson," was a great beau in his youth and in his later years: brilliant and learned if whimsical man.

He was a friend of the Garricks and one day was their guest at their villa at Hampton Court when Hannah More was also visiting there. They were walking together in the garden when his lordship astonished the fair and sprightly Hannah by a declaration of love and an offer of his heart and hand. Meeting with a positive refusal, he soon returned to the house and made a clean breast of it to Mrs. Garrick.

"I am very sorry for this refusal," he said in conclusion. "I should have liked so much to teach that nice girl Greek."

Our Languages.

What a lot of languages we talk, even if we talk only English! I was assailed by a man across the luncheon table with a language about a cup he final and confessed that it was quite unintelligible. Then another man talked about golf, which is another language. And then the woman's language elbows these columns. "The Countess — wore a sea green cloth skirt with a bolero of the same color and a white marabou stole, and a black taffeta bow garnished her huge hat of burnt tagel straw." It is a fine example of women's slang. But to the man it means nothing—but expense.—London Outlook.

Tactless.

"When Clubber gets arguing he loses all tact."

"As for instance?"

"Why, last night he told an opponent who is lame that he hadn't a leg to stand on, another who squints that he was sorry he couldn't see things as he did, and a man who stammered he urged not to hesitate in expressing an opinion."—Stray Stories.

An Ancient Sky Pilot.

From Garnett's "Anthology," volume 7, page 48, I copy the following, taken from the "Writings of Lucian," a Greek born about 100 A. D.:

"We were suddenly caught by a whirlwind, which turned our vessel several times around in a circle with tremendous velocity and lifted it above 3,000 stadia in the air, not settling it down again on the sea, but kept it suspended above the water at that height and carried us on, with swelled sails, above the clouds."

In these days of air conquest this quotation might be of utmost interest to aeronauts and also literary men. This ancient Gulliver long preceded Swift, and as for outdistancing Jules Verne another quotation is added:

"Having thus continued our course through the sky for a space of seven days and as many nights, on the eighth day we described a sort of earth in the air," etc. (which proved to be the moon).

The thoroughly familiar vernacular expression "going some" applies with original vigor to this early and perhaps first sky pilot.—New York Times.

The Pictured Cowboy.

I recall one picture by a celebrated artist of the east who does western things. It depicts a "Cowboy at Rest." He is lying on his stomach in the sun, his chin in his hands. His horse stands nearby, with the reins thrown over the horn of the saddle. Now, a cowboy in the daytime, well filled with beans and canned tomatoes, would not lie thus, and, above all, he would not leave his horse standing thus. He would pull the reins down over the horse's head and let them hang, elsewise his cowhorse would depart. I recall yet another picture of a faithful cowpuncher who with his trusty rifle defends himself from behind his dead horse, which he uses as a fortress. The dead horse is about four feet and a half through sidewise—excellent for a fortress, but a trifle wide for a thin flanked cowhorse. It would be useless to point out any detail like this to any earnest artist of today. Worse than useless would it be to suggest that a cowpuncher is the laziest created thing, for in art he must do perpetual stunts of "action."—Collier's Weekly.

A Maker of Bulls.

Some excellent bulls are credited to William Arolin, who was a London police judge in the thirties of the last century. He once remarked to counsel, "If you can show precisely at what moment the offense was committed and prove that the prisoner was not there when he did it, he could not possibly have done it." And he sagely added, "We cannot divest ourselves of common sense in a court of justice." Of a similar character was an axiom he once delivered himself of, which has been maliciously fathered on many other occupants of the bench, "If ever there was a case of clearer evidence than this case, this case is that case."

A Greater Loss.

Here is a laughable experience of Lord Sheffield. He was once walking down Piccadilly with a friend, to whom he explained that it would be impossible for any one to pick his pocket without his knowledge. Lord Sheffield's pocket handkerchief was hanging out, and his friend, having diverted his attention, quietly abstracted it. Instantly Lord Sheffield collared a seedy looking man who was passing and charged him with the theft, but, the friend producing the handkerchief and explaining the joke, the unfortunate individual whom his lordship had so unceremoniously seized was released with many apologies. The man beat a hasty retreat, and shortly afterward Lord Sheffield discovered that he had lost his pocketbook.—London Express.

Horse Sense.

A horse is so constructed by nature that he has no desire to do anything which will injure his health. He walks around whatever is not good for him and without a struggle. But man is so constructed that whatever is not good for him he wants to do. He eats too much, and he eats too fast. He drinks while eating, and there is nothing proper that he does without an effort. Why this distinction in favor of a horse? It may be said that a horse has only instinct, while a man has reason, which he should use. It is a pity that man was not given more instinct and less reason.—Atchison Globe.

A London weekly offered 2 guineas for a definition of faith, hope and charity. The winner is as follows: Faith, blind trust in a first page; hope, what investors are fed upon; charity, what some of them are likely to be brought to.

That is certainly not bad, but this one is perhaps even better: Faith, the gift that saves mankind; hope, the gift that cheers mankind; charity, the gift that makes man kind.

WOMEN'S WOES

Charleroi Women are Finding Relief at Last.

It does seem that women have more than a fair share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity; they must "keep up," must attend to duties in spite of constantly aching backs or headaches, dizzy spells, bearing down pains; they must stoop over, when to stoop means torture. They must walk and bend and work with racking pains and many aches from kidney pills. Kidneys cause more suffering than any other organ of the body. Keep the kidneys well and health is easily maintained. Read of a remedy for kidneys only that helps and cures the kidneys and is endorsed by people you know.

Mrs. William Stopp, 214 Second street, Charleroi, Pa., says: I have used Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for five years and consider them to be unequaled for kidney diseases. I suffered for some time from back ache and was also subject to headaches and dizzy spells. The kidney secretions were scanty and often contained a sediment. Doan's Kidney Pills were finally brought to my attention and procuring a box at Piper Bros. Drug Store, I began their use. They benefitted me greatly and I have since kept a supply on hand."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Resolution of Respects

Resolutions of respect adopted for Charleroi Circle, 303, of the Protected Home Circle, in memory of Mrs Maude Irene Vernom who departed from this life June 16, 1910.

Whereas, It has pleased the Almighty to remove from among us one of our worthy esteemed sisters, Mrs Maude Irene Vernom, in which we feel a great loss, but bow submissively to His will, therefore

Resolved, That the sudden removal of such a life from our midst leaves a vacancy that will be deeply realized by all members of our Circle

Resolved, That with sincere sympathy with the bereaved husband and relatives of the deceased, we express our hope that even so great a loss to us all may be overruled for good by Him who doeth all things well,

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes, a copy printed in the local paper and a copy forwarded to the bereaved family.

EPIGRAMS OF A QUEEN.

Witticisms of Marie Leczinska, the Wife of Louis XV.

The wife of Louis the Well Beloved had more need than most of the consolations of wisdom and philosophy. That she possessed them both in a marked degree is quite evident. "To great goodness Marie Leczinska joined solid information," says Imbert de Saint-Amand in "The Court of Louis XV." "She knew six languages—Polish, French, Italian, German, Swedish, Latin. Men of letters were struck by the shrewdness of her judgment on things of the mind. Several of her maxims have been preserved, which attest a lofty soul and a profound knowledge of the human heart. Here are some of them: 'We ought not to reflect more on the faults of others than will suffice to preserve ourselves from them.' 'Human wisdom teaches us to conceal our pride; religion alone destroys it.' 'To live peaceably in society we must open our eyes to the qualities which please us and shut them on the follies and caprices which shock us.' 'The women who pique themselves most on knowing what it is allowable for them to be ignorant of are those who care least about instructing themselves concerning what it is shameful not to know.' 'Many princes have regretted when dying that they had made war; we never see any who repented of having loved peace.' 'Good kings are slaves, and their people are free.' 'The only thing which can make amends for the slavery of the throne is the pleasure of doing some good.' 'In politics, as in morals, the shortest way to make men happy is to endeavor to make them virtuous.'"

WOMAN WHO WOULDN'T.

Idiotic Feminine Pose That Altogether Lacks Sense.

If some women and girls can't be great martyrs and are denied the exalted joy of being burned at the stake or otherwise sacrificed, they do not intend to blush unseen nevertheless. They fix up their own little role of martyrdom and play it to the bitter end—bitter, that is, to those who have to listen to tales of it, for, be it known, the role is milk and honey to whoever plays it.

As a rule, the feminine martyr starts in to do good to some one near and dear to her. So far so good. That surely is something to admire. But it's the way she goes about it. Perhaps it's a young brother that she's supporting. She assures you she could not earn money for herself; it's only for love of him, and that in face of the fact that she owns no property and hasn't a penny of income. Could anything be sillier or weaker or more puerile? How else would she live?

Another type, better off in worldly goods, declares that she wears pretty clothes only to please her children or her father or her friend. Why apologize? Very likely she does not make herself dangerously lovely, after all. Another enjoys a good table because her husband likes good things to eat. Again, why apologize? As well apologize for being respectable or having a little sense.

This being interesting, or at least in the limelight at all costs, is tiresome

RHEUMATIC TWINGES.

Before These Pains Get a Hold Take Precautions.

Rheumatism is now considered by many doctors to be a blood disease and should be treated by rigid dieting. Medicines, at least in the first stages, are less effective than curbing the appetite.

If one is of rheumatic tendency she should eat little or no red meat, cut out sugar, bread, sweets and acid fruits and should drink plenty of water.

This may seem like a severe treatment for a small complaint, at the first only twinges. Neglected, they mean untold suffering, often complete disablement.

It would be a good thing for those of us who are inclined to take rheumatic twinges lightly to recall the definition of the late Dr. Spurgeon, himself a great sufferer from rheumatism and gout, "If you put your hand into a vise and let a man press as hard as he can, that is rheumatism; if he can be got to press a little harder, it is gout."

Before that vise gets such a hold it cannot be loosed, take precautions. Dieting may not be pleasant, but it is pleasanter than being a rheumatic victim with only oneself to blame.

The Value of Tact.

A tactful person can make a whole roomful of people feel happy by conveying to them individually a tactful recognition of their individual accomplishments. To tell a shy girl that she is charming is to transform her and make her exercise her charm. To tell a dispirited man that he is courageous and clever is to put into him such an infusion of strength that he will be on the highroad to success.—Woman's Life.

It Depends!

"How do you pronounce s-t-i-n-g-y?" the teacher asked the young gentleman nearest the foot of the class. And the smart boy stood up and said it depended a great deal whether the word applied to a man or a bee.—London News

Where the Poems Go.

"But that old gown of yours is a poem."

"It may be a poem, but it's about ready for the wastebasket now."—Louisville Courier-Journal

THE BEY'S GUEST.

He Was Ready For the Emergency and Conquered the African.

A show of force is often the best kind of diplomacy. A writer in the Paris Temps tells a story of the French admiral Dupetit Thouars, who had been intrusted with the mission of exacting reparation from an African bey who had insulted a French consul.

As Dupetit-Thouars' demands were supported by the forcible argument of loaded cannon, the bey acknowledged that he had been too hasty and proffered profuse apologies. He even invited the admiral to his table and had a sumptuous repast prepared for his guest.

The consul warned the admiral to be on his guard.

"The bey is inclined to be malicious," said he, "and when he strokes his beard and smiles you may be sure that he is concocting some mischief."

"We shall see," was Dupetit-Thouars' reply.

He reached the bey's palace in good time. Profuse compliments and salutations were exchanged. All at once the admiral's foot met some soft, hairy substance lying on the carpet under the table. He looked down and saw a huge lion showing his formidable teeth. The bey smiled and stroked his beard.

Dupetit-Thouars did not wince, but called his dragoman.

"My pistols," was all he said.

The servant saluted, retired and brought back a pair of pistols on a silver tray. The admiral took them and placed them on the table before him. But the bey, still smiling, continued to stroke his patriarchal beard.

"Tell the commander," he said to the dragoman, "that if those pistols are for the purpose of blowing out my lion's brains they are quite insufficient and perfectly useless."

Then, like a skilful fencer countering his opponent's thrust, after the bey's ironical advice had been translated Dupetit-Thouars replied:

"Tell his highness that my pistols are not there to kill his lion, but to blow his own brains out at the first movement of this objectionable carpet."

Gravely, but a little pale, the man interpreted.

The smile died away on the bey's lips, and he no longer stroked his beard.

"My lion," said he, "is too well trained even to scratch one of my guests, but since he is not wanted he shall be sent away."

At a word from the bey the lion slowly and heavily left the room, like an obedient dog.

HISTORY ON A TUSK.

Picture Made by a Cave Man Millions of Years Ago.

Long ago, so long that even a scientist would hardly dare venture a guess as to the date, a man clad with only a wild beast's skin about his loins was sitting at the mouth of a cave in one of the rocky highlands in what is now southern France. He was scratching with a sharp flint on the fragments of an ivory tusk, perhaps picturing for some youthful admirers adventures through which he had passed or animals he had slain. That ivory chip was stored away as a treasure, to be lost and forgotten after the cave man's death. One day a man named Lartet, digging in the cavern floor, found it. On it was scratched a very fair representation of the hairy elephant, probably at once the oldest picture and the oldest human record in existence.

We know the cave man was a faithful workman, for the mammoth's fields of Siberia have yielded a perfect specimen of this extinct mammal, and the paleolithic picture is a true copy. Not only has this ancient sculptor given us a sample of the earliest art, but he has left us, more valuable than all, a historical record of his time, for this rude picture is simply a page from the cave man's history which, translated into twentieth century English, says, "Men, thinking men, were contemporaneous with the hairy elephant."

No record that any of humankind have ever left is half so ancient as this. The oldest Egyptian papyrus is a thing of yesterday compared to this paleolithic sculpture. While the cave man was living in Europe the valley of the Nile was yet only a wild waste. Egypt was not yet Egypt, and civilization as we know it had scarcely made a beginning.—Lippincott's.

Olden Tea Table Etiquette.

Tea table etiquette was somewhat complicated in the days of that "hardened and shameless tea drinker," Dr. Johnson, when many people thought nothing of drinking ten or twelve cups at a sitting. It was considered proper for the cups and saucers of a party of tea drinkers to be all passed up to the hostess in one batch when replenishment was considered necessary, and in order that each person might be sure of getting back the right cup the teaspoons were numbered. When the cups were passed up those who did not require any more were supposed to place the spoon in the cup. And thus writer remembers a very ancient dame ordering a small boy to place his spoon in his cup after the first cup had been supplied. He wondered for the reason. Now he knows that tea was once very expensive, and little boys were not expected to ask again.—St. James' Gazette.

An Arbitrary Classification.

"So you think every patriot has a more or less clearly defined ambition to hold public office?"

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum. "As a rule, patriots may be divided into two classes—the appointed and the disappointed."—Washington Star.

TUNING A PIANO.

A Professional's Experience With Irritable Von Bulow.

"Piano tuners are for the most part graduated from piano factories," says one of them. "While the piano tuner is required to know every part in the makeup of a piano, he is not necessarily a piano repairer. Nor can the average piano maker or repairer tune a piano. There are hundreds of expert makers and repairers of pianos who wouldn't be able to tell one tune from another.

"The piano tuner is born, not made. His acute sense of the vibrations of sound is given to him at his birth, and the man who hasn't got this sense can't become a piano tuner.

"Quite a number of years ago, when Hans von Bulow was in America, I tuned the piano upon which he played. He wouldn't allow the instrument to be tuned in the waceroom, one of his whims being that even a short removal of a piano knocks it all out of tune—something in that theory at that. So I tuned it upon the platform upon which he was to perform. He stood over me all the time, letting out agonized whoops and German cuss words until I couldn't help but laugh in his face.

"Finally, when I had the piano almost tuned, he gave a few more shrieks and, grabbing the wrench, began doing the job all over again. I let him go ahead, and inside of three minutes he had the piano so hopelessly out of tune that it took me three hours to get it into shape again. Herr von Bulow had to pay double for this little exhibition of temper."—Spokane Sportsman Review.

The Word "Person."

General Benjamin F. Butler, it is said, once asserted that a woman was not a "person," and a London suffragette insists that the word "person" in its legal sense includes woman. The word has had an interesting history. Signifying by etymology something to make a sound through, the Latin "persona" began by meaning an actor's mask with its mouthpiece. Then it meant the character represented by the player—"dramatis personae." Then it came to mean the part or character one sustains in real life, and so the "persona ecclesiae," the man who represented the church, became known as a "person" in a special sense and was eventually spelled as "parson." On the other hand, "person" faded away to mean just anybody. And so, though a woman naturally resents being referred to as a "person" in ordinary talk, many women no less naturally desire to count as "persons" in the eye of the franchise law.—Chicago News.

Opportunity.

In one of the old Greek cities there stood long ago a statue. Every trace of it has vanished now, but there is still in existence an epigram which gives us an excellent description of it, and as we read the words we can surely discover the lesson which those wise old Greeks meant that the statue should teach to every passerby. The epigram is in the form of a conversation between a traveler and the statue:

"What is thy name, O statue?"

"I am called Opportunity."

"Who made thee?"

"Lysippus."

"Why art thou on thy toes?"

"To show that I stay but a moment."

"Why hast thou wings on thy feet?"

"To show how quickly I pass by."

"But why is thy hair so long on thy forehead?"

"That men may seize me when they meet me."

"Why, then, is thy head so bald behind?"

"To show that when I have once passed I cannot be caught."

Dropping the Curtain.

"No, Mr. Slowun," said the fair possessor of the square chin, "I must respectfully decline to become your other half."

"But why?" asked the astonished young man, who had believed that he was the favored one.

"Because," replied the female extender of the frosty digit, "the man I marry must be brave and fearless. Tonight you let out the information that you have loved me for five long, weary years, but have not dared mention it until the present meeting. A man who has no more nerve than that would hide under the bed while his wife went downstairs to interview a burglar who was making a raid on the family larder. Therefore, Mr. Slowun, I will work the piano for a little slow music while the curtain drops on the farewell scene. You will find your hat on the usual peg of the hall rack. Good evening!"—London Mail.

Speculative Life Insurance.

A mania for speculative insurances on the lives of public personages prevailed in England during the eighteenth century. Warren Hastings, the pretender, the rebel lords or the unfortunate Admiral Byng answered equally the purpose of speculation, and there were also regular quotations on the lives of notorious highwaymen. Sir Robert Walpole at one period of his career, when his life was endangered by popular tumults, was insured for many thousands, and when George II. fought at Dettingen 25 per cent was paid against his return. Such speculative insurances were, however, largely checked by the gambling act of 1774, which made insurable interest a necessary condition for a valid policy.—Argonaut.

LOVE'S DOUBTING.

A Phase of Life Through Which Many Married Women Pass.

The only incidents that marred our happiness were sudden and inexplicable flare ups. Occasionally, to our amazement, a trifle would make us glare at each other like animals and speak bitterly. Five minutes later we would express our regret and shame. Soon I perceived that these quarrels were due to nerves and to the trials of adjustment. One evening we had an argument that was particularly violent and distressing. It ended by Frank's going to bed. I remained in the seat where I had been reading, and for a long time I pretended to myself that I was going on reading. Presently tears fell on my book. Then I said "How silly all this is! I am making myself suffer, and I am making Frank suffer too. I will go and tell him that I am sorry." So I stole into the bedroom. He was sleeping peacefully.

That little experience, not without humor as I look back on it, made me first realize how differently Frank and I could be affected by the same cause. It marked the beginning of my uneasiness. Soon I stopped reading aloud to Frank; why, I can't remember. Little things disturbed me. At first the thought of them used to be swept away by my delight on seeing Frank in the evening. Then, too, there would come the feeling that those things were accidents and would not occur again. In the second year of our marriage, just after dinner, Frank would read the newspaper till he began to doze. Then he would rouse himself and try to be agreeable. The effort troubled me. There was also the quiet and efficient deciding of little details without reference to my wishes. And here I felt there was danger. Once I said to myself, "Suppose I should tire him," and I grew cold. Then I thought of the moment when I should discover that I was tiring him. Here my sense of humor came to my rescue, and I felt better. I imagine that many women pass through this phase.—American Magazine.

The Talkative Barber.

"The talkativeness of barbers long has been the subject for puns and jokes," said a barber. "I had always fancied the matter one of recent origin until the other day. You know in my profession we have a great deal of spare time. Well, the other day I was sitting on the bench waiting for the shaves and hair cuts to come in and to while away the time was glancing through a copy of Plutarch's 'Archelaus.' Imagine my consternation when I happened on a line reading:

"'A prating barber asked Archelaus how he would be trimmed. He answered, "In silence."'

"Well, that got me. I never knew they even had barbers that long ago. I always supposed the ancients let their whiskers grow and that they wore curly locks as long as their togas, but it seems that the barber is an ancient relic and that his talking proclivities are a matter of history. I'll have to give it to the humorists there.

"But, say," he whispered, "that manicure girl over there has got us beat to a frazzle. I wonder if there's anything in Plutarch about her."—Kansas City Star.

The Sunny Side of Superstition.

That there is anything genial, cheering or therapeutically valuable about superstition may seem a tall statement. The adjective generally associated with it is "dark." On the contrary, there is something very brightening about a four leaf clover. Who is not a little more of an optimist for picking up a horseshoe? What lonely farmer's wife, stormbound on a winter afternoon, with unwelcome leisure on her hands, but feels a little quickening of the pulse as she drops her scissors and beholds them sticking up in the carpet or discovers that she has laid an extra place at the table? Company signs are the commonest and welcomed of all superstitions. The scissors, the needle, the dishcloth, the fork, the Saturday sneeze, all inculcate hospitality and reward it by an unexpected visitor. If the needle slants as it stands up in the crack of the floor it foretells a gentleman. Run, young daughters of the house, and put a blue bow in your hair!—Atlantic Monthly.

Man's Responsibility For Disease.

Man's often ill considered interference with nature has more than once aided in the dissemination of disease. Even in the vegetable world he brought over phylloxera to ravage European vineyards and took coffee to Ceylon, where a mold was waiting to compass its speedy ruin. In Africa he has fostered nagana in cattle and sleeping sickness in his own species. In fact, much of his rule of earth has resulted in the genesis of what Metschnikow aptly calls "disharmonies."—London Outlook.

THE BANNER GIRL.

American Women the Most Charming Creatures In the World.

American girls have won the reputation of being the most charming in the world. This is due not so much to surpassing physical beauty as to manner and expression.

The girl who has learned the art of controlling her features perfectly has gained a great advantage over other members of her sex. As she uses her features, so she may be described as beautiful or plain, interesting or commonplace, refined or otherwise. This art is almost an instinct with American girls.

A perfectly placid countenance, rarely brightened by expression, is too apt to denote insipidity. On the other hand, there are women who glory in the extremes of expression. Between the two there is a happy medium that should be cultivated.

A common error into which many girls fall is that of opening the mouth wide and raising the brows—which, by the way, causes the forehead to wrinkle in a manner that in time scores permanent furrows—in order to express pleasure.

Far more attractive is the woman who smiles with a slight parting of the lips, at the same time raising the brows ever so little.

To knit the brows in marked disapproval is extremely unbecoming, for expressions of anger and scorn do not sit well on a woman's countenance.

THE CHAMELEON.

This Curious Animal Is Like Two Half Creatures Joined.

The chameleon is not allied closely to any other animal. It stands as a genus by itself. The nervous centers in one lateral half operate independently of those in the other. This seems outrageous, and it is, but it is true. The chameleon has two lateral centers of perception—of sensation and of motion. There exists also a third center—that common one in which abides the power of concentration by means of which the two sides of the creature may be forced to work in harmony with each other. But this center of concentration does not always dominate the situation. Notwithstanding the strictly symmetrical structure of the animal's two halves, the eyes move quite independently, and they convey distinct and separate impressions to their respective centers of perception. As of the eyes, so of the other members—each reports to and is controlled by its own center.

The result is that when the faculty of concentration becomes disturbed everything is jumbled. Let the chameleon be much agitated and its movements grow erratic. They are those of two creatures fastened together, or, rather, of two half creatures joined. Each half exhibits its intention of going its separate way. The result is a pitiable confusion of movement. There is no concordance of action. A curious example of the chameleon's helplessness when unduly excited is found in the fact that it cannot swim. The shock of being plunged into water upsets the poise of its faculty for concentration. Forthwith each side strikes out wildly for itself, to its own undoing. The chameleon is the only four legged vertebrate that cannot swim.

When the creature is calm every impulse to motion is referred to the common center of concentration, and the entire organism acts in fitting accord with the commands issued by that faculty. Thus, while totally different impressions from the two eyes are transmitted from their centers to the common one, that concentrating power decides as to which scene is the more important and then directs the eye otherwise engaged also to regard it. The same principle applies in the control of all the members—so long as the animal remains unexcited. Any observer may easily verify the existence of this dual nature in a superficial way by some experiments with a sleeping chameleon. A touch on one side of the animal will wake that side up, while the other side sleeps calmly on.

Crowded New York.

New York always was crowded. In 1837 it had about thirty first class hotels. Most of them were below City Hall park. The capacity of these houses was about 6,000. The average number of visitors to the city at that time was estimated to be 20,000. It is stated by an early historian that it was not an unusual sight to see strangers in the city wandering from house to house, carrying their baggage with them, seeking lodging for the night. At that time there were only three hotels conducted on the European plan. Lodging at the latter was from $2.50 to $3.50 a week.—New York Press.

She Threw Him Over Twice.

"Why have you thrown over Mr. Pitcoe?"

"What made his leg crooked?"

"I ran over it with my motor car."—Success Magazine.

THE TIPPING HABIT.

It Was Worse In the Eighteenth Century Than It Is Now.

The tipping habit is bad enough nowadays, but in the eighteenth century it was a greater evil than it is at the present time. A writer in the Cornhill Magazine tells some stories to illustrate the old condition of things.

In Edinburgh in 1760 tipping became such an evil that the Society of Clerks enacted that all servants should be forbidden to take tips and members be forbidden to give them. This example was followed by other clubs and societies. Today there is a rule in most clubs against feeing the servants.

An eccentric Irish gentleman, Lord Taaffe, used to attend his guests to the door, and if they offered any money to the servants who were lined up with the guests' baggage the host would say, "If you give, give it me, for it was I that did buy the dinner."

A well known colonel while sitting at dinner inquired the names of the host's servants. "For," said he, "I cannot pay them for such a good dinner, but I should like to remember them in my will."

Another eccentric gentleman after patiently redeeming his hat, sword, cane and cloak to the very bottom of his purse turned to the two remaining servants who were waiting obsequiously, each with a glove, and said affably: "Keep those. I will not trouble to buy them back. They are old and not worth a shilling."

MILLAGE FIXED BY SCHOOL BOARD SAME AS LAST YEAR

Donald C. Williard of Philadelphia is Elected High School Principal for Coming Year

At a meeting of the School Board last night Donald C. Williard of Philadelphia was elected principal of the High school. He is a young man, but has had considerable experience. He is a graduate of Smith's College and has one year at Princeton University. Miss Harriet Wagner and Miss Ina Kline were elected to positions in the grades, but two principals and one grade teacher remain to be elected. The finance committee made their report and the millage for the coming year was set at 15 mills, five for building and 10 for school purposes, this being the same as last year.

WASHINGTON AVES. TAKE OVER THE EPISCOPAL TEAM

The Washington Avenues by a final inning rally last night defeated the Episcopals by the score of 4 to 3, in one of the best games thus far this season. In that session after Stroud who batted for Fontanesi, was out, Carmell contracted a single. Hall bid for two bases, scoring Carmell and on a passed ball went third. On an error of the catcher he went home with the winning run. The Washington Avenues scored in the first, on two hits and a sacrifice. They scroed again in the sixth inning on a three baser of Hess's and an error. The Episcopals got their first in the third inning on two hits, one for three bases, and two in the fifth on a base on balls, a single, a stolen base and two errors. The score:

HER GREETING.

In Spite of the Old Lady's Care She Managed to Blunder.

The daughters of a certain charming old lady in Washington are frequently much upset by the odd social blunders of their parent, whose failings in this respect are, however, more than offset by her kindliness of manner.

Among the callers to the house of this family was a Mrs. Farrell, who, after some years of widowhood, again married, this time becoming the wife of a Mr. Meggs.

"If you love us, mother," said one of the girls when the newly married lady's card had been brought in one afternoon shortly after the completion of the honeymoon, "don't make the mistake of calling her Mrs. Farrell."

The mother solemnly promised to commit no faux pas and as she went downstairs was heard to repeat to herself, "Meggs—Meggs—Meggs—not Farrell."

At the conclusion of the call the old lady was met at the head of the stairs by the daughter, who at once observed an ominous expression of despondency on the old lady's face.

"Oh, mother," she exclaimed, "surely you didn't"—

"No, Clara," replied the mother emphatically, "I didn't. I was so careful to call her Mrs. Meggs all the time."

"Well, what's the trouble, then?"

"Oh, dear!" murmured the kindly old lady, as she sank into a chair. "It was awful of me, I know! When I greeted her I said: 'I am glad to see you, Mrs. Meggs. How is Mr. Farrell?'"—Harper's Weekly.

John K. Tener Acclaimed Candidate for Governor

HIS NAME ONLY ONE SUGGESTED

Train With Charleroi Delegation Will Arrive Home Tonight at 10:30 O'clock Leaving Harrisburg at 2:00 O'clock This Afternoon.

THE OTHER RESULTS

Congressman John K. Tener, of Charleroi, was nominated by acclamation at 12 o'clock today as candidate for Governor by the Republican State convention at Harrisburg. No other candidates were placed in nomination. Mr. Tener's running mate will be Congressman John Reynolds of Bedford, for Lieutenant Governor.

The convention was called to order at the appointed time this morning, and it was not long until the matter of choosing the man to represent the Republican party for Governor came up for final action. All possible opposition to Mr. Tener's candidacy had been withdrawn by this time, the last to pull out of the fight being Lieutenant Governor Robert S. Murphy of Johnstown and a clear field was left for the Charleroi man.

The nomination speech was made as per arrangement by Judge J. F. Taylor of Washington and the second was by Representative George E. Alter of Allegheny county.

Following the selection of Congressman Reynolds as a candidate for Lieutenant Governor, the appointment of the candidates for the other important places was taken up, and Henry Houck, of Lebanon, was named for Secretary of Internal affairs and Jno. Wright of Susquehanna for State Treasurer. The entire ticket is regarded as a strong one, and has [illegible]

[illegible] special left Harrisburg [illegible] o'clock this afternoon, carrying the joyful Washington county delegates, who were exuberant with delight at the easy victory of their favorite. It is due to arrive in Charleroi tonight on the return trip at 10:30 o'clock. Thereupon it is proposed to have one of the biggest informal celebrations ever known.

There is a move already on foot to give Mr. Tener a rousing reception upon his return home. It is not expected that he will return with the Charleroi delegation, but go to Washington, where he will remain for a few days. In the meantime, arrangements will be made for his home coming celebration, which will surpass by far any ever given to any individual in this section.

Alleges Fraud

Alleging fraud and [illegible] the recent primary election of the Second legislative district, Berkey M. Boyd of Greensburg has instituted legal proceedings for the return of the ballot boxes of Arnold and Hyde Park for a recount.

Charleroi's Showing.

Charleroi did herself proud in the showing made at Harrisburg last evening in favor of the candidacy of Congressman John K. Tener for Governor. Whatever the future may have in store, one thing demonstrated at the State capitol is that Charleroi is on the map. The attention the Magic City delegation attracted of the assembled political hosts, and the advertising our town has gotten throughout the State, is worth all the effort and expense of the excursion. For Charleroi alone it is a good investment.

But more direct and further reaching results are expected. There is perfect confidence on the part of John K. Tener's friends that he will, if elected, fill the executive chair in a way that will not only be a credit to the Pennsylvania state government, but to himself as well. Mr. Tener's chances steadily increased, since his modest announcement that if he were nominated for Governor by his party he couldn't do otherwise than accept the honor and delegation after delegation of delegates have lined up for him since meeting him and his friends at Harrisburg. The glad tidings were received by Charleroi people with most hearty congratulations to to their fellow townsman.

A Beneficent Institution

The social last week for the benefit of the Monessen-Charleroi Hospital by the local Ladies' Auxiliary, calls attention to a worthy institution that has made few appeals to the public, but is nevertheless in urgent need of more aid than it has ever gotten. Next to the schools, perhaps, no public institution is so important to a community as a hospital. Particularly is this true in an industrial section like this where modern invention and development have increased rather than diminished danger to life and limb.

Since its establishment the Monessen-Charleroi Hospital has proven itself a most beneficient institution in the alleviation of human suffering. Its availability affords prompt relief in the distressing accidents which occur with such distressing frequency in this community. Scarcely a week goes by when some bruised or bleeding form is not borne there from the immediate vicinity to be tenderly nursed to life again. Even when life is hopeless the patient's dying moments can be made comfortable instead of adding to the torture in a jolting car in the long journey to a distant hospital.

No one knows how many lives have been saved at the Monessen-Charleroi Hospital Its existence is added security to life in this community, because its facilities are always available when sudden operations are necessary. This of itself is sufficient grounds for liberal support and appreciation. As it is the institution stands a haven of refuge to suffering humanity, where previously there was no alternative but to face the King of Terrors. There should be renewed effort on the part of the public to give support to the hospital.

ELECTRIC SPARKS

Charleroi never was such a happy deserted town as it is today.

Would the Washington Observer please inform us just whom they would sugggest for Governor. Wonder if Mr. Acheson wouldn't like to think that he could make a good run. If he really does think so, it would be a pity not to give him opportunity of running on an independent ticket such as suggested by Rev. Nicholson.

It would be dangerous for the poilte French duelist of today to fire into the air the first shot for then he might hit an aviator.

For mental rest is prescribed less discussion of the pennant prospects, and more discussion of the game of gold.

If walking is considered a much better exercise than autombile riding, the indications are that many of us are not looking for exercises.

Ain't it hot?

It is a very noticeable fact that in some places the nose tints are in much greater variety than rose tints.

Some gas engines shut down simply from jealousy when they smell the gasoline from an automobile.

With the automobile making things disagreeable on the street and the gas engine in the celler making things very disagreeable, what will the airship in the air do.

It is said that Kaiser Bill needs help to obtain and retain seat on the water wagon. What he needs is some more of the Roosevelt strenuosity.

Next Thing is to Make Choice of Successor

Who will be the successor to Congressman J. K. Tener in Congress, is a question which is bothering politicians of this district at the present time.

Charles Bentley who was elected as a representative in the general assembly at the last election and C. E. Carothers of Canonsburg, are mentioned as possibilities. and Judge J. Sharpe Wilson of Beaver county is prominently mentioned. R.K. Aiken of New Castle is another man suggested for the position.

The Republican state convention today adopted a rule for the nomination of a congressman in the Washington-Beaver-Lawrence district to succeed John K. Tener. The primaries law is silent on the subject and it is up to the convention to make a general law governing such cases.

CHARLEROI PARTY CREATES IMPRESSION AT HARRISBURG

Boom Candrdacy of Congressman J. K Tener

BIG PARADE A FEATURE

Washington, Lawrence and Beaver Send Big Delegation

Charleroi and Washington county people in general attracted much attention last night in Harrisburg, by their parade, and Congressman John K. Tener who today was nominated for Governor by the Republican party was tendered a great ovation. The city of Harrisburg was alive with enthusiasts booming Mr. Tener's candidacy from early yesterday until late at night. With the Charleroi delegation was the Williamsport band, the best in the state, which joined the party at Tyrone.

The train load of Washington, Lawrence and Beaver county boomers with the Charleroi party at the head arrived at Harrisburg at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The Washington county seat delegation had the Washington Cornet Band and Judge J. F. Taylor who placed Mr. Tener's name before the convention was in the party. With bands playing, red fire burning, streamers floating in the air and banners displayed announcing John K. Tener for Governor, the Western Pennsylvanians marched over the principal streets of the city, and to the Lochiel Hotel, where Mr. Tener is quartered. He appeared on the balcony to greet them and was given a great ovation. A great time of handshaking followed. A song adapted for the occasion was heartily sung during the parade to the tune "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly," the words of it being as follows:

Has anybody here seen Tener?
T-E-N-E R.
Has anybody here seen Tener?
Tener from Charleroi
His hair is black and his eyes are blue;
He's the Governor for me and you.
Has anybody here seen Tener? Who?

CARNIVAL OPENS IN FULL BLAST

The big trained wild animal show of the Barkoot Carnival company opened for the first time last night, and crowds viewed the unusually meritous attractions furnished. This is one of the big feature shows with the carnival. The Old Plantation, Jesse James, and the number of other shows did big business, and the Moorish Palace, one of the features was packed to the doorway from first to last. The big fat man on McKean makes it very interesting for his audience. He promises a very interesting program tonight.

The Flea Circus is one of the most interesting features ever presented in the city. It consists of 350 performing fleas. Last night was the first night for this show to open, owing to an accident in the last town. The big storm blew down the tent and live electric wires coming in contact with the fleas, wounded and crippled a number of the stars. Yesterday Mr. Wendel, the proprietor received a shipment of educated fleas and the rest of the week they will be on exhibition. The fleas do acrobatic work, juggling, bicycle riding. walking tight wire, dancing and many other feats. The question was asked last evening as to how he began trainibg fleas and he answered: "At first when fleas are captured they are compelled to wear a ball and chain for six months, in order to stop them from jumping. Then they are educated and trained." The life of the fleas is from eight to twelve years. A number of these fleas that have been on exhibition for the past twelve years and the star is "Tokbar," The high dive will be at 10:30 o'clock tonight.

POPULAR COUPLE WEDDED AT CHURCH

This morning at 9 o'clock at St. Jerome's Catholic church took place the wedding of Miss Mary Elizabeth Fries, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Fries. of 128 Fallowfield avenue, and Francis J. Lee of Dunlevy. The wedding ceremony was performed by the the uncle of the bride, Rev. W. D. Fries, in the presence of a large number of frends and relatives of the families. The couple were attended by Miss Stella Connelly and Patrick Moore. The wedding march from Mendelsshon was played by Mrs. Bertie Kleist. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served to the couple and this afternoon at 2 o'clock a dinner and reception was tendered the couple, the members of the families and immediate friends at the home of the bride's parents. The couple leave later in the afternoon for the Northern part of the state, where they will spend a week with friends, upon their return to take up their residence in Charleroi. Both are well known in Charleroi and this vicinity. The bride is an accomplished young lady and popular among a host of friends and acquaintances. The groom is an employe of the Pittsburg Railway company, being a conductor on the local line.

LADY MACCABEES OUTING AT PARK

The Lady Maccabee order of Monessen is today holding their annual outing at Eldora Park and a good crowd being present, a fine time is being enjoyed. There are people present from all along the valley, many from Charleroi.

Mediaeval Architecture.

On the lower floor of the Brooklyn museum may now be seen a series of photographs that cannot fail to be of interest to every one to whom the ideas and practices of mediaeval architects and artists make a genuine appeal.

They illustrate the doctrine held by the curator of fine arts of the museum that the builders of mediaeval times frequently introduced irregularities or deviations from mechanical exactness in their churches and cathedrals by intention and that where irregularities are found which may have been accidental the evident purpose of the designer was to ignore, more or less successfully on the part of the builder, due to the general indifference to symmetry felt by architects in the middle ages and to their willingness to see in divergence from straight lines an element of beauty.—New York Times

MISSED ONE POINT.

The Lady Told Him What More He Could Have Said

"I am going to tell you the truth about yourself," he said

"Go on," said the young and ambitious actress

"I have in my time had rare opportunities to observe beautiful, graceful and talented women, and I violate no confidence in saying that you are the queen of them all You unite in your lovely person that peculiar magnetism which lays audiences at your feet Your genius shining through all the deficiencies of stagecraft, enables you to triumph over every obstacle So supreme are you that you have the right to rise above all conventionalities, to marry, to love, to discard whom you please, and no one will dare to criticise. Your work will live. You are the very personification of the highest art United with this your perfection of beauty gives you the just title to a lasting fame."

"Is all that true?" she asked softly.

"Absolutely. Would you have me say more? What more could I say?"

She sighed.

"You might," she answered, "have mentioned my clothes and my figure."—Puck.

Disinterested.

Lord Monboddo, an eminent member of the Scotch judiciary and one of the clear cut figures in Boswell's immortal "Life of Johnson," was a great beau in his youth and in his later years a brilliant and learned if whimsical man

He was a friend of the Garricks and one day was their guest at their villa at Hampton Court when Hannah More was also visiting there. They were walking together in the garden when his lordship astonished the fair and sprightly Hannah by a declaration of love and an offer of his heart and hand Meeting with a positive refusal he soon returned to the house and made a clean breast of it to Mrs Garrick

"I am very sorry for this refusal" he said in conclusion "I should have liked so much to teach that nice girl Greek"

Our Languages.

What a lot of languages we talk even if we talk only English! I was assailed by a man across the luncheon table with a language about a cup tie final and confessed that it was quite unintelligible Then another man talked about golf, which is another language And then the woman's language elbows these columns "The Countess —— wore a sea green cloth skirt with a bolero of the same color and a white marabou stole, and a black taffeta bow garnished her huge hat of burnt tagel straw." It is a fine example of women's slang. But to the man it means nothing—but expense.—London Outlook.

Tactless.

"When Clubber gets arguing he loses all tact."

"As for instance?"

"Why, last night he told an opponent who is lame that he hadn't a leg to stand on, another who squints that he was sorry he couldn't see things as he did, and a man who stammered he urged not to hesitate in expressing an opinion"—Stray Stories

An Ancient Sky Pilot.

From Garnett's "Anthology," volume 7, page 48, I copy the following, taken from the "Writings of Lucian," a Greek born about 100 A. D.:

"We were suddenly caught by a whirlwind, which turned our vessel several times around in a circle with tremendous velocity and lifted it above 3,000 stadia in the air, not setting it down again on the sea, but kept it suspended above the water at that height and carried us on, with swelled sails, above the clouds."

In these days of air conquest this quotation might be of utmost interest to aeronauts and also literary men. This ancient Gulliver long preceded Swift, and as for outdistancing Jules Verne another quotation is added.

"Having thus continued our course through the sky for a space of seven days and as many nights, on the eighth day we described a sort of earth in the air," etc. (which proved to be the moon)

The thoroughly familiar vernacular expression "going some" applies with original vigor to this early and perhaps first sky pilot.—New York Times.

The Pictured Cowboy.

I recall one picture by a celebrated artist of the west who does western things "It depicts a cowboy at rest." He is lying on his stomach in the sun, his chin in his hands His horse stands nearby, with the reins thrown over the horn of the saddle. Now, a cowboy in the daytime, well filled with beans and canned tomatoes, would not lie thus, and, above all, he would not leave his horse standing thus He would pull the reins down over the horse's head and let them hang, elsewise his cowhorse would depart I recall yet another picture of a faithful cowpuncher who with his trusty rifle defends himself from behind his dead horse, which he uses as a fortress The dead horse is about four feet high and fairly enough sidewise—excellent for a fortress, but a trifle wide for a thin flanked cowhorse. It would be useless to point out any detail like this to any earnest artist of today. Worse than useless would it be to suggest that a cowpuncher is the laziest created thing, for in art he must do perpetual stunts of "action."—Collier's Weekly.

A Maker of Bulls.

Some excellent bulls are credited to William Arolin, who was a London police judge in the thirties of the last century. He once remarked to counsel "If you can show precisely at what moment the offense was committed and prove that the prisoner was not there when he did it, he could not possibly have done it." And he sagely added, "We cannot divest ourselves of common sense in a court of justice." Of a similar character was an axiom he once delivered himself of, which has been maliciously fathered on many other occupants of the bench, "If ever there was a case of clearer evidence than this case, this case is that case."

A Greater Loss.

Here is a laughable experience of Lord Sheffield. He was once walking down Piccadilly with a friend, to whom he explained that it would be impossible for any one to pick his pocket without his knowledge. Lord Sheffield's pocket handkerchief was hanging out, and his friend, having diverted his attention, quietly abstracted it. Instantly Lord Sheffield collared a seedy looking man who was passing and charged him with the theft, but, the friend producing the handkerchief and explaining the joke, the unfortunate individual whom his lordship had so unceremoniously seized was released with many apologies The man beat a hasty retreat, and shortly afterward Lord Sheffield discovered that he had lost his pocketbook.—London Express

Horse Sense.

A horse is so constructed by nature that he has no desire to do anything which will injure his health. He walks around whatever is not good for him and without a struggle But man is so constructed that whatever is not good for him he wants to do He eats too much and he eats too fast. He drinks while eating, and there is nothing proper that he does without an effort. Why this distinction in favor of a horse? It may be said that a horse has only instinct, while a man has reason, which he should use. It is a pity that man was not given more instinct and less reason.—Atchison Globe.

A London weekly offered 2 guineas for a definition of faith, hope and charity. The winner is as follows: Faith, blind trust in a first page; hope, what investors are fed upon; charity, what some of them are likely to be brought to

That is certainly not bad, but this one is perhaps even better. Faith, the gift that saves mankind; hope, the gift that cheers mankind; charity, the gift that makes man kind.

WOMEN'S WOES

Charleroi Women are Finding Relief at Last.

It does seem that women have more than a fair share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity; they must "keep up," must attend to duties in spite of constantly aching backs or headaches, dizzy spells, bearing down pains; they must stoop over, when to stoop means torture. They must walk and bend and work with racking pains and many aches from kidney pills. Kidneys cause more suffering than any other organ of the body. Keep the kidneys well and health is easily maintained. Read of a remedy for kidneys only that helps and cures the kidneys and is endorsed by people you know.

Mrs. William Stopp, 214 Second street, Charleroi, Pa., says: I have used Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for five years and consider them to be unequaled for kidney diseases. I suffered for some time from back ache and was also subject to headaches and dizzy spells. The kidney secretions were scanty and often contained a sediment. Doan's Kidney Pills were [illegible] to my attention and procuring a box at Piper Bros. Drug Store, I began their use. They benefitted me greatly and I have since kept a supply on hand."

Resolution of Respects

Resolutions of respect, adopted for Charleroi Circle, 303, of the Protected Home Circle, in memory of Mrs Maude Irene Vernom who departed from this life June 16, 1910.

Whereas, It has pleased the Almighty to remove from among us one of our worthy esteemed sisters, Mrs Maude Irene Vernom, in which we feel a great loss, but bow submissively to His will, therefore

Resolved, That the sudden removal of such a life from our midst creates a vacancy that will be deeply realized by all members of our Circle

Resolved, That with sincere sympathy with the bereaved husband and relatives of the deceased, we express our hope that even so great a loss to us all may be overruled for good by Him who doeth all things well,

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes, a copy printed in the local paper and a copy forwarded to the bereaved family.

EPIGRAMS OF A QUEEN.

Witticisms of Marie Leczinska, the Wife of Louis XV.

The wife of Louis the Well Beloved had more need than most of the consolations of wisdom and philosophy. That she possessed them both in a marked degree is quite evident. "To great goodness Marie Leczinska joined solid information," says Imbert de Saint-Amand in "The Court of Louis XV." "She knew six languages—Polish, French, Italian, German, Swedish, Latin. Men of letters were struck by the shrewdness of her judgment on things of the mind. Several of her maxims have been preserved, which attest a lofty soul and a profound knowledge of the human heart. Here are some of them: 'We ought not to reflect more on the faults of others than will suffice to preserve ourselves from them.' 'Human wisdom teaches us to conceal our pride; religion alone destroys it.' 'To live peaceably in society we must open our eyes to the qualities which please us and shut them on the follies and caprices which shock us.' 'The women who pique themselves most on knowing what it is allowable for them to be ignorant of are those who care least about instructing themselves concerning what it is shameful not to know.' 'Many princes have regretted when dying that they had made war; we never see one who repented of having loved peace.' 'Good kings are slaves, and their people are free.' 'The only thing which can make amends for the slavery of the throne is the pleasure of doing some good.' 'In politics, as in morals, the shortest way to make men happy is to endeavor to make them virtuous.'"

WOMAN WHO WOULDN'T.

Idiotic Feminine Pose That Altogether Lacks Sense.

If some women and girls can't be great martyrs and are denied the exalted joy of being burned at the stake or otherwise sacrificed, they do not intend to bluff unseen nevertheless. They fix up their own little role of martyrdom and play it to the bitter end—bitter, that is, to those who have to listen to tales of it, for, be it known, the role is milk and honey to whoever plays it.

As a rule, the feminine martyr starts in to do good to some one near and dear to her. So far so good. That surely is something to admire. But it's the way she goes about it. Perhaps it's a young brother that she's supporting. She assures you she could not earn money for herself; it's only for love of him, and that in face of the fact that she owns no property and hasn't a penny of income. Could anything be sillier or weaker or more puerile? How else would she live?

Another type, better off in worldly goods, declares that she wears pretty clothes only to please her children or her father or her friend. Why apologize? Very likely she does not make herself dangerously lovely, after all. Another enjoys a good table because her husband likes good things to eat. Again, why apologize? As well apologize for being respectable or having a little sense.

This being interesting, or at least in the limelight at all costs, is tiresome

RHEUMATIC TWINGES.

Before These Pains Get a Hold Take Precautions.

Rheumatism is now considered by many doctors to be a blood disease and should be treated by rigid dieting. Medicines, at least in the first stages, are less effective than curbing the appetite.

If one is of rheumatic tendency she should eat little or no red meat, cut out sugar, bread, sweets and acid fruits and should drink plenty of water.

This may seem like a severe treatment for a small complaint, at the first only twinges. Neglected, they mean untold suffering, often complete disablement.

It would be a good thing for those of us who are inclined to take rheumatic twinges lightly to recall the definition of the late Dr. Spurgeon, himself a great sufferer from rheumatism and gout, "If you put your hand into a vise and let a man press as hard as he can, that is rheumatism; if he can be got to press a little harder, it is gout."

Before that vise gets such a hold it cannot be loosed, take precautions. Dieting may not be pleasant, but it is pleasanter than being a rheumatic victim with only oneself to blame.

The Value of Tact.

A tactful person can make a whole roomful of people feel happy by conveying to them individually a tacit recognition of their individual accomplishments. To tell a shy girl that she is charming is to transform her and make her exercise her charm. To tell a dispirited man that he is courageous and clever is to put into him such an infusion of strength that he will be on the highroad to success.—Woman's Life.

It Depends!

"How do you pronounce s-t-i-n-g-y?" the teacher asked the young gentleman nearest the foot of the class. And the smart boy stood up and said it depended a great deal whether the word applied to a man or a bee.—London News

THE BEY'S GUEST.

He Was Ready For the Emergency and Conquered the African.

A show of force is often the best kind of diplomacy. A writer in the Paris Temps tells a story of the French admiral Dupetit-Thouars, who had been intrusted with the mission of exacting reparation from an African bey who had insulted a French consul.

As Dupetit-Thouars' demands were supported by the forcible argument of loaded cannon, the bey acknowledged that he had been too hasty and proffered profuse apologies. He even invited the admiral to his table and had a sumptuous repast prepared for his guest.

The consul warned the admiral to be on his guard.

"The bey is inclined to be malicious," said he, "and when he strokes his beard and smiles you may be sure that he is concocting some mischief."

"We shall see," was Dupetit-Thouars' reply.

He reached the bey's palace in good time. Profuse compliments and salutations were exchanged. All at once the admiral's foot met some soft, hairy substance lying on the carpet under the table. He bent down and saw a huge lion showing his formidable teeth. The bey smiled and stroked his beard.

Dupetit-Thouars did not wince, but called his dragoman.

"My pistols," was all he said.

The servant saluted, retired and brought back a pair of pistols on a silver tray. The admiral took them and placed them on the table before him. But the bey, still smiling, continued to stroke his patriarchal beard.

"Tell the commander," he said to the dragoman, "that if those pistols are for the purpose of blowing out my lion's brains they are quite insufficient and perfectly useless."

Then, like a skilled fencer countering his opponent's thrust, after the bey's ironical advice had been translated Dupetit-Thouars replied:

"Tell his highness that my pistols are not there to kill his lion, but to blow his own brains out at the first movement of this objectionable carpet."

Gravely, but a little pale, the dragoman interpreted.

The smile died away on the bey's lips, and he no longer stroked his beard.

"My lion," said he, "is too well trained even to scratch one of my guests, but since he is not wanted he shall be sent away."

At a word from the bey the lion slowly and heavily left the room, like an obedient dog.

HISTORY ON A TUSK.

Picture Made by a Cave Man Millions of Years Ago.

Long ago, so long that even a scientist would hardly dare venture a guess as to the date, a man clad with only a wild beast's skin about his loins was sitting at the mouth of a cave in one of the rocky highlands in what is now southern France. He was scratching with a sharp flint on the fragments of an ivory tusk, perhaps picturing for some youthful admirers adventures through which he had passed or animals he had slain. That ivory chip was stored away as a treasure, to be lost and forgotten after the cave man's death. One day a man named Lartet, digging in the cavern floor, found it. On it was scratched a very fair representation of the hairy elephant, probably at once the oldest picture and the oldest human record in existence.

We know the cave man was a faithful workman, for the [illegible] fields of Siberia have yielded a perfect specimen of this extinct mammal, and the paleolithic picture is a true copy. Not only has this ancient sculptor given us a sample of the earliest art, but he has left us, more valuable than all, a historical record of his time, for this rude picture is simply a page from the cave man's history which, translated into twentieth century English, says, "Men, thinking men, were contemporaneous with the hairy elephant."

No record that any of humankind have ever left is half so ancient as this. The oldest Egyptian papyrus is a thing of yesterday compared to this paleolithic sculpture. While the cave man was living in Europe the valley of the Nile was yet only a wild waste. Egypt was not yet Egypt, and civilization as we know it had scarcely made a beginning.—Lippincott's.

Olden Tea Table Etiquette.

Tea table etiquette was somewhat complicated in the days of that "hard eyed and shameless tea drinker," Dr. Johnson, when many people thought nothing of drinking ten or twelve cups at a sitting. It was considered proper for the cups and saucers of a party of tea drinkers to be all passed up to the hostess in one batch when replenishment was considered necessary, and in order that each person might be sure of getting back the right cup the teaspoons were numbered. When the cups were passed up those who did not require any more were supposed to place the spoon in the cup. And this writer remembers a very ancient dame teaching a small boy to place his spoon in his cup after the first cup had been emptied. He wondered for the reason. Now he knows that tea was once very expensive, and little boys were not expected to ask again.—St. James' Gazette.

TUNING A PIANO.

A Professional's Experience With Irritable Von Bulow.

"Piano tuners are for the most part graduated from piano factories," says one of them. "While the piano tuner is required to know every part to the makeup of a piano, he is not necessarily a piano repairer. Nor can the average piano maker or repairer tune a piano. There are hundreds of expert makers and repairers of pianos who wouldn't be able to tell one tune from another.

"The piano tuner is born, not made. His acute sense of the vibrations of sound is given to him at his birth, and the man who hasn't got this sense can't become a piano tuner

"Quite a number of years ago, when Hans von Bulow was in America, I tuned the piano upon which he played. He wouldn't allow the instrument to be tuned in the wareroom, one of his whims being that even a short removal of a piano knocks it all out of tune—something in that theory at that. So I tuned it upon the platform upon which he was to perform. He stood over me all the time, letting out agonized whoops and German cuss words until I couldn't help but laugh in his face.

"Finally, when I had the piano almost tuned, he gave a few more shrieks and, grabbing the wrench, began [illegible] with wadin. I let him go ahead, and inside of three minutes he had the piano so hopelessly out of tune that it took me three hours to get it into shape again. Herr von Bulow had to pay double for this little exhibition of temper."—Spokane Sportsman Review.

The Word "Person."

General Benjamin F. Butler, it is said, once asserted that a woman was not a "person," and a London suffragette insists that the word "person" in its legal sense includes woman. The word has had an interesting history. Signifying by etymology something to make a sound through, the Latin "persona" began by meaning an actor's mask with its mouthpiece. Then it meant the character represented by the player—"dramatis personae." Then it came to mean the part or character one sustains in real life, and so the "persona ecclesiae," the man who represented the church, became known as a "person" in a special sense and was eventually spelled as "parson." On the other hand, "person" faded away to mean just anybody. And so, though a woman naturally resents being referred to as a "person" in ordinary talk, many women no less naturally desire to count as "persons" in the eye of the franchise law.—Chicago News.

Opportunity.

In one of the old Greek cities there stood long ago a statue. Every trace of it has vanished now, but there is still in existence an epigram which gives us an excellent description of it, and as we read the words we can surely discover the lesson which those wise old Greeks meant that the statue should teach to every passerby. The epigram is in the form of a conversation between a traveler and the statue:

"What is thy name, O statue?"

"I am called Opportunity."

"Who made thee?"

"Lysippus."

"Why art thou on thy toes?"

"To show that I stay but a moment."

"Why hast thou wings on thy feet?"

"To show how quickly I pass by."

"But why is thy hair so long on thy forehead?"

"That men may seize me when they meet me."

"Why, then, is thy head so bald behind?"

"To show that when I have once passed I cannot be caught."

Dropping the Curtain.

"No, Mr. Slowun," said the fair possessor of the square chin, "I must respectfully decline to become your other half."

"But why?" asked the astonished young man, who had believed that he was the favored one.

"Because," replied the female extender of the frosty digit, "the man I marry must be brave and fearless. Tonight you let out the information that you have loved me for five long, weary years, but have not dared mention it until the present meeting. A man who has no more nerve than that would hide under the bed while his wife went downstairs to interview a burglar who was making a raid on the family larder. Therefore, Mr. Slowun, I will work the piano for a little slow music while the curtain drops on the farewell scene. You will find your hat on the usual peg of the hall rack. Good evening!"—London Mail.

Speculative Life Insurance.

A mania for speculative insurances on the lives of public personages prevailed in England during the eighteenth century. Warren Hastings, the pretender, the rebel lords or the unfortunate Admiral Byng answered equally the purpose of speculation, and there were also regular quotations on the lives of notorious highwaymen. Sir Robert Walpole at one period of his career, when his life was endangered by popular tumults, was insured for many thousands, and when George II. fought at Dettingen 25 per cent was paid against his return. Such speculative insurances were, however, largely checked by the gambling act of 1774, which made insurable interest a necessary condition for a valid policy.—Argonaut.

Amiable.

"They say Thelma's husband is a very amiable man."

"Amiable! I should say so! I have known that man to laugh at a joke when he was taking down the stovepipe."—Baltimore American.

LOVE'S DOUBTING.

A Phase of Life Through Which Many Married Women Pass

The only incidents that marred our happiness were sudden and inexplicable flare ups. Occasionally, to our amazement a little would make us glare at each other like animals and [illegible] We would express our regret and shame soon I perceived that these quarrels were due to nerves and to the trials of adjustment One evening we had an argument that was particularly violent and distressing. It ended by Frank's going to bed I remained in the seat where I had been reading, and for a long time I pretended to myself that I was going on reading Presently tears fell on my book. Then I said "How silly all this is! I am making myself suffer, and I am making Frank suffer too I will go and tell him that I am sorry" So I stole into the bed room He was sleeping peacefully

That little experience, not without humor as I look back on it, made me first realize how differently Frank and I could be affected by the same cause It marked the beginning of my uneasiness. Soon I stopped reading aloud to Frank; why I can't remember Little things disturbed me At first the thought of them used to be swept away by my delight on seeing Frank in the evening Then, too there would come the feeling that [illegible] were accidents and would not occur again. In the second year of our marriage, just after dinner Frank would read the newspaper till he began to doze. Then he would rouse himself and try to be agreeable. The effort troubled me There was also the quiet and efficient deciding of little details without reference to my wishes And here I felt there was danger Once I said to myself, "Suppose I should tire him, and I grew cold Then I thought of the moment when I should discover that I was tiring him Here my sense of humor came to my rescue, and I felt better I imagine that many women pass through this phase—American Magazine

The Talkative Barber.

"The talkativeness of barbers long has been the subject for puns and jokes," said a barber "I had always fancied the matter one of recent origin until the other day. You know in my profession we have a great deal of spare time. Well, the other day I was sitting on the bench waiting for the shaves and hair cuts to come in and to while away the time was glancing through a copy of Plutarch's 'Archelaus.' Imagine my consternation when I happened on a line reading:

"'A prating barber asked Archelaus how he would be trimmed. He answered, "In silence"'

"Well, that got me. I never knew they even had barbers that long ago. I always supposed the ancients let their whiskers grow and that they wore curly locks as long as their togas, but it seems that the barber is an ancient relic and that his talking proclivities are a matter of history I'll have to give it to the humorists there.

"But, say," he whispered, "that manicure girl over there has got us beat to a frazzle. I wonder if there's anything in Plutarch about her."—Kansas City Star

The Sunny Side of Superstition.

That there is anything genial, cheering or therapeutically valuable about superstition may seem a tall statement. The adjective generally associated with it is "dark." On the contrary, there is something very brightening about a four leaf clover Who is not a little more of an optimist for picking up a horseshoe? What lonely farmer's wife, stormbound on a winter afternoon, with unwelcome leisure on her hands, but feels a little quickening of the pulse as she drops her scissors and beholds them sticking up in the carpet or discovers that she has laid an extra place at the table? Company signs are the commonest and welcomed of all superstitions. The scissors, the needle, the dishcloth, the fork, the Saturday sneeze, all inculcate hospitality and reward it by an unexpected visitor. If the needle slants as it stands up in the crack of the floor it foretells a gentleman Run, young daughters of the house, and put a blue bow in your hair!—Atlantic Monthly.

Man's Responsibility For Disease.

Man's direct or consequent interference with nature has more than once acted in the dissemination of disease. Even in the vegetable world he brought over phylloxera to ravage European vineyards and took coffee to Ceylon, where a mold was waiting to compass its speedy ruin In America he has fostered nagana in cattle and sleeping sickness in his own species In fact much of his rule of faith has resulted in the jewels of what Nora Unknow aptly calls "dis harmonies"—London Outlook

THE BANNER GIRL.

American Women the Most Charming Creatures in the World.

American girls have won the reputation of being the most charming in the world. This is due not so much to surpassing physical beauty as to manner and expression

The girl who has learned the art of controlling her features perfectly has gained a great advantage over other members of her sex. As she uses her features, so she may be described as beautiful or plain interesting or commonplace, refined or otherwise. This art is almost an instinct with American girls

A perfectly placid countenance, rarely brightened by expression, is too apt to denote insipidity. On the other hand, there are women who glory in the extremes of expression. Between the two there is a happy medium that should be cultivated.

A common error into which many girls fall is that of opening the mouth wide and raising the brows—which, by the way, causes the forehead to wrinkle in a manner that in time scores permanent furrows—in order to express pleasure.

Far more attractive is the woman who smiles with a slight parting of the lips, at the same time raising the brows ever so little.

To knit the brows in marked disapproval is extremely unbecoming, for expressions of anger and scorn do not sit well on a woman's countenance.

THE CHAMELEON.

This Curious Animal Is Like Two Half Creatures Joined.

The chameleon is not allied closely to any other animal It stands as a genus by itself. The nervous centers in one lateral half operate independently of those in the other This seems outrageous and it is, but it is true. The chameleon has two lateral centers of perception—of sensation and of motion. There exists also a third center—that common one in which abides the power of concentration by means of which the two sides of the creature may be forced to work in harmony with each other But this [illegible] of concentration does not always dominate the situation Notwithstanding the strictly symmetrical structure of the animal's two halves, the eyes move quite independently, and they convey distinct and separate impressions to their respective centers of perception As of the eyes, so of the other members—each reports to and is controlled by its own center

The result is that when the faculty of concentration becomes disturbed everything is jumbled. Let the chameleon be much irritated and its movements grow erratic They are those of two creatures [illegible] together, or, rather of two half creatures joined Each half exhibits its intention of going its separate way The result is a pitiable confusion Fortunately That there is no concordance of action A curious example of the chameleon's helplessness when greatly excited is found in the fact that it cannot swim The shock of being plunged into water upsets the poise of its faculty for concentration. Forthwith, each side strikes out wildly for itself to its own undoing The chameleon is the only four legged vertebrate that cannot swim

When the creature is calm every impulse to motion is referred to the common center of concentration, and the entire organism acts in fitting accord with the commands issued by that faculty. Thus, while totally different impressions from the two eyes are transmitted from their centers to the common one, that concentrating power decides as to which scene is the more important and then directs the eye otherwise engaged also to regard it. The same principle applies in the control of all the members—so long as the animal remains unexcited. Any observer may easily verify the existence of this dual nature in a superficial way by some experiments with a sleeping chameleon A touch on one side of the animal will wake that side up, while the other side sleeps calmly on.

Crowded New York.

New York always was crowded In 1837 it had about thirty first class hotels. Most of them were below City Hall park The capacity of these houses was about 6,000. The average number of visitors to the city at that time was estimated to be 20,000 It is stated by an early historian that it was not an unusual sight to see strangers in the city wandering from house to house, carrying their baggage with them, seeking lodging for the night At that time there were only three hotels conducted on the European plan. Lodging at the latter was from $2 50 to $3 50 a week—New York Press

THE TIPPING HABIT.

It Was Worse In the Eighteenth Century Than It Is Now.

The tipping habit is bad enough nowadays, but in the eighteenth century it was a greater evil than it is at the present time. A writer in the Cornhill Magazine tells some stories to illustrate the old condition of things

In Edinburgh in 1760 tipping became such an evil that the Society of Clerks enacted that all servants should be forbidden to take tips and members be forbidden to give them. This example was followed by other clubs and societies. Today there is a rule in most clubs against feeing the servants

An eccentric Irish gentleman, Lord Taaffe, used to attend his guests to the door, and if they offered any money to the servants who were lined up with the guests baggage the host would say, "If you give, give it me, for it was I that did buy the dinner"

A well known colonel while sitting at dinner inquired the names of the host's servants "For," said he, "I cannot pay them for such a good dinner, but I should like to remember them in my will."

Another eccentric gentleman after patiently redeeming his hat, sword, cane and cloak to the very bottom of his purse turned to the two remaining servants who were waiting obsequiously, each with a glove, and said affably: "Keep those. I will not trouble to buy them back. They are old and not worth a shilling."

MILLAGE FIXED BY SCHOOL BOARD SAME AS LAST YEAR

Donald C. Williard of Philadelphia is Elected High School Principal for Coming Year

At a meeting of the School Board last night Donald C. Williard of Philadelphia was elected principal of the High school. He is a young man, but has had considerable experience. He is a graduate of Smith's College and has one year at Princeton University. Miss Harriet Wagner and Miss Ina Kline were elected to positions in the grades, but two principals and one grade teacher remain to be elected. The finance committee made their report and the millage for the coming year was set at 15 mills, five for building and 10 for school purposes, this being the same as last year.

WASHINGTON AVES. TAKE OVER THE EPISCOPAL TEAM

The Washington Avenues by a final inning rally last night defeated the Episcopals by the score of 4 to 3, in one of the best games thus far this season. In that session after Stroud who batted for Fontanesi, was out, Carmell contracted a single. Hall bid for two bases, scoring Carmell and on a passed ball went third. On an error of the catcher he went home with the winning run. The Washington Avenues scored in the first, on two hits and a sacrifice. They scroed again in the sixth inning on a three baser of Hess's and an error. The Episcopals got their first in the third inning on two hits, one for three bases, and two in the fifth on a base on balls, a single, a stolen base and two errors. The score:

Particulars.

Mme Calve at a ladies' luncheon was condoned by an elderly spinster on the ground that a laudatory article about her had not been very subtle or discriminating

"I know well," said the spinster smiling behind her glittering spectacles, "that only discriminating praise counts as praise with you"

"Don't talk about discriminating praise," answered Mme. Calve. "Fulsome flattery is good enough for me." —Washington Star

HER GREETING.

In Spite of the Old Lady's Care She Managed to Blunder.

The daughters of a certain charming old lady in Washington are frequently much upset by the odd social blunders of their parent, whose failings in this respect are however, more than offset by her kindliness of manner.

Among the callers to the house of this family was a Mrs Farrell, who, after some years of widowhood, again married, this time becoming the wife of a Mr Meggs

"If you love us, mother," said one of the girls when the newly married lady's card had been brought in one afternoon shortly after the completion of the honeymoon, "don't make the mistake of calling her Mrs Farrell."

The mother solemnly promised to commit no faux pas and as she went downstairs was heard to repeat to herself, "Meggs—Meggs—Meggs—not Farrell."

At the conclusion of the call the old lady was met at the head of the stairs by the daughter, who at once observed an ominous expression of despondency on the old lady's face

"Oh, mother," she exclaimed, "surely you didn't"—

"No Clara" replied the mother emphatically, "I didn't I was so careful to call her Mrs Meggs all the time."

"Well what's the trouble, then?"

"Oh, dear!" murmured the kindly old lady, as she sank into a chair "It was awful of me, I know' When I greeted her I said 'I am glad to see you, Mrs Meggs How is Mr. Farrell?'"—Harper's Weekly.
